

Dr Wendy Ng is a Lecturer at Adelaide Law School at the University of Adelaide. She researches in competition law, focusing on China, development, and political economy issues. She obtained her PhD from the University of Melbourne, where her thesis was awarded the Chancellor's Prize for Excellence in the PhD Thesis and the Harold Luntz Graduate Research Prize for Best PhD Thesis. A book based on her thesis will be published by Cambridge University Press. She is also an editor of the China Competition Bulletin and has been a consultant to the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission. Previously, she was a lawyer at leading law firms in Melbourne and New York.