A. Research (Evidence-Based Advocacy)

CUTS is a research, advocacy, networking and capacity building organisation. These elements of the organisation’s functions are most of the times integrated while developing the methodology for implementing socio-economic policy projects. CUTS CCIEER has been undertaking outcome-oriented research on policy issues that is ‘need based’ and almost always with an inbuilt-element of advocacy; consistent with the organisation’s approach to producing and using research/evidence. There is a constant effort to link research outcomes with policy processes, thereby contributing to the approach of ‘evidence-based policy advocacy’, which many organisations like CUTS have embraced as a course to policy related activities.

National
i. Need for a Competition Policy in India – this was established as an outcome of a project entitled ‘Towards a Functional Competition Policy for India’, which was implemented thorough research based advocacy approach in the country (http://www.cuts-ccier.org/funcomp-overview.htm);
ii. Competition policy and its interrelationship with regulatory policy issue – through various initiatives, CUTS has been looking at the interface between competition and regulatory policy issues in specific sectors (a recent project referred to as the ‘India Competition and Regulation Report’ http://www.cuts-ccier.org/icrr/icrr.htm, has been developed to produce first-hand information and knowledge on this aspect;
iii. Structural and Functional elements of regulatory institutions – through a review of regulatory institutions across developing countries (as was done under a couple of projects: http://www.cuts-international.org/sectoral-regulation.htm and http://www.cuts-international.org/regFrame2.htm);
iv. Investment environment (policy and practice) in India – An assessment of the investment policy and investment promotion was done by CUTS, especially from the perspectives of FDI on the request of the OECD in 2008.
v. Consumer Protection policy – In year 2001, a report ‘State of the Indian Consumer’ was also published that examined the plight of Indian consumers in the light of the UN Guidelines on Consumer Protection.

International
As a part of the various projects that the Centre has undertaken in over 30 countries, mostly in Asia and Africa, it has covered (very broadly) the following research themes:
i. Interface between competition policy and sectoral regulation;
ii. Competition policy and consumer protection policy;
iii. International cartels and its impacts
iv. Competition policy and development
v. Political Economic constraints in regulatory policy implementation in developing countries
vi. Investment policy and development linkages vii. Responsible business conduct in developing countries viii. Analysing weaknesses in Competition and Consumer legislations and recommending amendments/new legislations

B. Outreach and Dissemination

i. Briefings – The centre prepares various types of documented outputs like briefings report, briefing papers, policy briefs, discussion papers, etc. These are either connected to a specific project or are non-project documents that are pro-actively developed by the Centre in response to a critical contemporary issue.

ii. Newsletters – CUTS CCIER produces two newsletters: Reguletter (flagship international newsletter) and PolicyWatch (a newsletter that cover national policy issues of India), on a quarterly basis and is disseminated to over 2500 recipients by post.

iii. E-discussion groups – CUTS CCIER manages a couple of e-discussion groups FunComp Forum (with a focus on covering national issues, with over 800 members) and Competition Online Forum or COLF (a unique and extremely active e-discussion group dedicated to international competition issues, with over 1500 members)

iv. Mailing List - over 20,000 contacts in our database with who we correspond on a regular basis

v. Media outreach - regular articles, press releases, newsclips, etc. are shared with the Indian and international press.

vi. Parliamentary Outreach – The Centre facilitated formation of Parliamentarians’ Forum on Economic Policy Issues (PARFORE, http://www.cuts-international.org/parliamentary_forum.htm), which has membership cutting across various political parties. Periodical discussions over specific issues hosted under PARFORE have helped Indian parliamentarians to comprehend complex economic policy issues, thereby facilitating an informed debate inside the Parliament.

vii. Representations – Various staff members of the organization are invited to participate and/or speak at national and international events on issues that are germane to the Centre.

C. Networking

One of the functions that CUTS has mastered is its networking skill, something that has indeed been imbibed and institutionalised by CUTS CCIER. The following points portent this element of the organisation’s abilities:

i. Institutional partnerships – A database of over 20,000 contacts provides CUTS CCIER an institutional memory that is extremely useful in establishing partnerships/associations, etc. Further the organization and indeed the centre enters into institutional partnerships for implementing projects in the over 30 countries that the Centre is actively engaged. Some of these partners are long-term partners, while others are project-based.

ii. INCSOC - International Network of Civil Society Organisation on Competition (INCSOC, www.incsoc.net) is a one-of-its-kind network of CSOs on competition issues. The network currently has over 120 members from over 55 countries.
D. Capacity Building (Training)

Eastern and Southern Africa

I. Training for staff of the Trade Practice Investigation Commission (Ethiopia)

Responding to a request from the Ministry of Trade and Industry, Ethiopia CUTS organised two rounds of hands on trainings on competition policy and law issues for the staff of the TPIC (competition agency of Ethiopia) and other government department/agencies. The first round of trainings focused on basic competition issues (2-day orientation training held in March 2006), while the second round (5-day competition training held in May 2008) focused on specific aspects of competition from the perspective of competition enforcement. Trainees were provided a theoretical background and then equipped with hands-on training of how to handle specific cases through case work and subsequent discussions. In total more than 40 people have been trained in all, and CUTS expects to be requested again by the Ministry soon for another follow up round.

II. National Training Workshops on Competition Policy and Law (Botswana, Ethiopia, Malawi, Mauritius, Mozambique, Namibia and Uganda)

Over the period between July to October, 2007 CUTS in association with its country partners in the above mentioned seven countries organised a series of 3-day long Training Workshops to familiarize key national stakeholders with competition policy issues. These training workshops were organised under the auspices of the 7Up3 project (Capacity Building on Competition Policy in Select Countries of Eastern and Southern Africa). An average number of 25-30 trainees participated in each of these training workshops representing various government departments/agencies, regulatory bodies, research institutions/university, media, consumer organizations/NGOs, lawyers business chambers, etc. The need for the workshops had been revealed over the period of implementation of the 7Up3 project.

E. Dedicated Capacity Building Centre established by CUTS

CUTS Institute of Regulation & Competition (CIRC)

CUTS incepted CIRC (www.circ.in) in September 2005 at Jaipur, India. It is an initiative towards creating an intellectual and knowledge base on the core activity areas of competition policy & law and economic and infrastructure regulation. The slogan ‘enhancing knowledge, strengthening capacity’ explicitly defines the work area of the institute. The Centre’s activities are divided into two programme areas: Economic and Infrastructure Regulation, and Competition Policy & Law.

Lectures, case analysis, interaction with experts are used as tools to provide strategic understanding, developing core skills and encouraging in-depth knowledge of the issues involved. The unique feature of CIRC is that the quality of educational and training programmes is at par with the developed countries. This is achieved through association with renowned universities/institutions in the identified subjects. The course curriculum is designed jointly by CIRC and the respective university/institute.

CIRC is governed by 20-member Governing Council, chaired by Dr. C. Rangarajan, Member of Parliament and until recently Chairman, Economic Advisory Council to the Prime Minister of India. It also includes several eminent persons: economists, judges and former civil servants as its members.

CIRC works on a customer-focused approach and aims to:

i. offer educational and training programmes on the referred subjects, while maintaining international standards;

ii. facilitate research to enhance understanding and explore inter-disciplinary linkages among the identified subjects;

iii. create and maintain a knowledge database; and

iv. offer consultancy services to governments, regulators and business.

An archive of CIRC’s training events on competition policy and law is available at: http://www.circ.in/event-archivesCS.htm
