CUTS CCIER Activities Report

Stepping into West Africa

CUTS Centre for Competition, Investment & Economic Regulation (CUTS CCIER) is implementing a two-year project ‘Strengthening Constituencies for Effective Competition Regimes in Select West African Countries’ (also referred to as 7Up4 Project: www.cuts-ccier.org/7up4/En/index.htm) with the support of the Department for International Development (DFID), UK; the International Development Research Centre (IDRC), Canada and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Sweden. The project would be implemented in seven countries, viz. – Burkina Faso, The Gambia, Ghana, Mali, Nigeria, Senegal and Togo. The launch of this project in June 2008 marks the realisation of a long-standing aspiration of CUTS to venture into the region, as a part of a long-term strategy of expansion in Africa.

The 7Up4 project aims to raise the profile of competition at the national and the regional levels in West Africa. It would highlight the relevance and need for an effective competition regime for economic development and poverty reduction in select West African countries/region, and therefore set in motion the process of evolution and implementation of competition regimes.

To meet this end, a leading national institution (partner) in each of the project countries will be involved in intensive research to evaluate the competition concerns facing the project countries, including their regional dimensions and implications. The research findings would subsequently be disseminated nationally (and in the region) through a network in order to raise awareness on competition issues and equip national stakeholders to contribute to the process of national competition reforms.

The Launch meeting attracted over 60 participants from across Africa, Europe and Asia

CUTS organised a two-day meeting on 19-20 June in Accra (Ghana) in collaboration with Institute of Statistical, Social and Economic Research (ISSER), Ghana to launch the project.

Speaking at the occasion, Deputy Minister of Trade, Industry, Private Sector Development & President’s Special Initiatives of Ghana, Hon’ble Kwaku Agyeman-Manu stressed on the commitment of the Ghanaian government towards evolving competitive markets in the country to achieve economic growth and development. Honourable Ambassador of India, Ruchi Ghanashyam underscored the need for strengthening South-South economic cooperation for achieving better developmental objectives in developing countries.

Ernest Aryeetey, Director, ISSER, Ghana asserted the need for developing countries to evolve the right regulatory environment and institutions to catalyse private sector development. Mike Hammond, Head of DFID, Ghana conveyed that the British government recognised the need for a dynamic private sector to emerge (especially in the developing world) for economic development; and that an effective competition regime constituted an important component of an enabling environment that facilitates the emergence of a dynamic private sector.

Pradeep S Mehta, Secretary General, CUTS indicated that CUTS is committed to assisting developing and least developed countries of Asia and Africa to advocate for competition reforms as a means to achieve economic development and consumer welfare.
CUTS with the support of the Norwegian Agency for Development Cooperation (NORAD) Norway, is implementing a project on electricity regulation and reforms over a span of two years (2008-2010) in Bangladesh, India (States of West Bengal and Rajasthan) and Nepal (http://www.cuts-ccier.org/RESA/index.htm).

The objective of the project is to enhance the capacity of consumers – enabling them to understand issues involved, take up action-oriented research and carry out advocacy with policymakers and regulatory agencies on electricity regulatory/policy issues. The project was initiated in Kolkata (India), on March 13-14, 2008.

Specifically, the project aims to:
- facilitate effective representation of consumers’/civil society’s views in policy formulation and regulatory processes in electricity sector in Bangladesh, India and Nepal;
- strengthen capacity of civil society to take up action research and advocacy on regulatory/policy issues in the electricity sector; encourage regional co-operation and experience sharing on the subject through networking; and
- create a vertical mechanism to take the concerns and views from the grassroots to the policy level and vice versa, along with having horizontal linkages between different players at the same level.

Local Inception Workshops (LIWs) were organised in each of the project territories (Bangladesh, Rajasthan, West Bengal, and Nepal) in the month of April 2008. The objective of these workshops LIW was primarily to orient key stakeholders about the objective and anticipated outcomes of the project were discussed at the workshops.

Participants comprised of representatives from the partner organisations, members of the Reference Group (RG) – a group of 15-20 national stakeholders, who would be consulted to implement the project in each of the territories, academia, government officials, regulators and media.

The discussants mostly highlighted various problems that consumers have been facing in recent years with regard to electricity. They also discussed about the governance issues in the sector. The issues of huge corruption in the sector over the last few years came as a big area of discussion. Corruption and theft were hot topics for discussion.

Participants also discussed about the roles they can play in raising the level of awareness, the capacity and the level of participation of the consumers in the process of policy formulation and reforms in electricity.

Ghana Competition Bill

CUTS International has been engaged by the Ministry of Trade and Industry, Private Sector Development and President’s Special Initiatives (MOTIPS/PSDI) of Ghana to develop a Competition Bill for Ghana from the perspectives of international best practices, taking into consideration the socio-economic and political realities of the country. CUTS prepared the first draft of the Bill and submitted it to the MOTIPS/PSDI in May 2008.

In order to refine the Bill, CUTS with assistance from MOTIPS/PSDI organised a stakeholder’s workshop in Accra, Ghana on June 18, 2008. Stakeholders included the major sectoral regulators, government departments and consumer associations, whose role is crucial for competition administration in Ghana. The purpose of the workshop was to solicit views, comments and suggestions on areas to help improve the Draft Bill to make it more suitable and acceptable for the economy. In addition, personal interviews were also conducted with select stakeholders to register their views on competition in Ghana and specifically on essential components that the competition Bill would cover.

CUTS is now in the process of revising the Draft Bill in line with the comments gathered from the workshop and the subsequent interviews. It is expected that before submitting the Bill to the Ministry, the Ghanian stakeholders would also be given another opportunity to take a closer look and comment on the pre-final Bill.
Training in Ethiopia

CUTS CCIER, in collaboration with CUTS Institute for Regulation and Competition (CIRC) organised a five-day training workshop on ‘Competition Law Enforcement in Ethiopia’ in Addis Ababa, during May 12-16, 2008.

The objectives of the five-day training programme were to develop analytical capacities of practitioners to comprehend competition policy and law issues; and understand the expected role of different stakeholders in fostering competitive markets and accelerating economic growth.

The event was conducted by international resource persons, who deliberated on various aspects of competition policy and law sharing their experiences and knowledge with the participants. Over the period of the five days, the participants sharpened their skills on various aspects of competition policy and law through lectures, experiences of resource persons, simulation exercises, group discussions, etc.

About 25 participants representing the Trade Practices Investigation Commission (TPIC), Ministry of Trade and Industry, Ethiopian National Parliament, Addis Ababa University, Consumer Association and the Media attended the event. Competition Law Under A Hyperinflationary Environment: The Case Of Zimbabwe
Africa News, April 16, 2008
Cornelius Dube

The enforcement of competition law in Zimbabwe, formally adopted in 1996 through the enactment of the Competition Act, 1996, now the Competition Act [Chapter 14:28] is under serious challenges due to a hyperinflationary environment. This is self-evident when one compares competition law enforcement experience before the economic crisis and the present situation.

The challenges presented by the prevailing situation in Zimbabwe are an interesting and unique case study for those in the competition field. Research institutions and scholars should develop an interest on the competition scenario in the country so as to devise new methods of handling competition cases under a hyperinflationary environment.

Cartelising inflation?
The Economic Times, June 14, 2008
Pradeep S Mehta & Siddhartha Mitra

The wholesale price index has scaled new heights and reached 8.75 percent with prices and temperatures threatening to go through the roof. This promises to be a hot and expensive summer. Such long bouts of inflation generate anger against two lobbies — the incumbent political coalition for its allegedly faulty policies and the suppliers of essential inputs like cement and steel.

This article examines the allegations of cartelisation against the iron and steel industry. Note that iron and steel are inputs into a wide variety of goods — from cycles to automobiles, bridges to stadiums, apartments to offices. When iron and steel prices rise, accusations are understandable on the grounds of human psychology.

About tender tendering
Financial Express, May 04, 2008
Ramrao Mundhe

At a point when the future of the country hinges on the development of its infrastructure, unfair bidding can only be an impediment in the way to development. Even while mere bidding does not guarantee a fair outcome of best quality and price, an unfair one can simply be disastrous to the public service delivery system at large.

The Planning Commission, Government of India expects a massive investment of US$492bn in the infrastructure sector over the Eleventh Five Year plan. For this the government is largely banking on support from the private sector, as nearly a third of this investment is likely to come through the private sector with public private partnership (PPP) mode as one of the preferred routes.

CUTS wary over lack of ‘neutral competition’ in auto fuel retail
The Hindu Business Line, April 03, 2008

CUTS has expressed concern over the lack of “competitive neutrality” in enabling the private sector to sell petroleum goods in the market. The Government and the regulator need to create a level-playing field for operators to foster competition in the sector.

With the international crude oil prices hovering over US$100 per barrel and given that domestic petroleum products retail prices is regulated, all oil companies including public sector undertakings are loosing Rs 8-10 per litre on petrol and diesel. CUTS has also pointed out that the consumer choice would be restricted by forcing them to purchase the product only from the public sector companies.
