10:00 - 10:15	Opening Remarks Bipul Chatterjee , Executive Director, CUTS International Setting the context: The aim of this initiative is simple – to provide a platform for genuine exchange of perception, knowledge and understanding of ideas and realities between consumer organisations (CSOs) and subject matter experts. The workshop will have an interactive approach.
10:15 - 11:15	Introductory Session Swati Punia , Assistant Policy Analyst, CUTS International The introductory session will bring the CSOs up to date with the trajectory of data privacy in India. Attendees will gain a sense of why data privacy and data protection have echoes in the current policy environment. They will understand their rights and responsibilities in this new environment, and the need to acquire skills and competencies that will help them traverse the digital ecosystem safely. A brief background on the dynamics and relevance of cross border data flow, and the growth of perceived tensions with national sovereignty will also be given.
11:15 - 12:15	Session 1: Consent and Notice Faiza Rahman , Research Fellow, National Institute of Public Finance and Policy The notice-consent framework relies on users' giving an informed consent. As per PDPB, data fiduciaries will have to ensure this. Failure to adhere may give rise to grave legal consequences, not only for data fiduciaries, but also for the users. Hence, this session will talk about the intent, purpose, and implication of having this framework embedded in the PDPB.
12:15 - 12:30	Tea/Coffee Break

12:30 – 13:30	Session 2: User Rights and Entitlements Rahul Sharma , Founder, The Perspective, and Country Head-India, International Association of Privacy Professionals Rights come along with certain duties. The duty to exercise the power (rights) responsibly lies with the consumer. The PDPB introduces certain rights, such as right to withdrawal, right to be forgotten, and data portability. This session intends to make consumers understand their meaning, usage (operation), and the possible legal and economic consequences associated with their usage.
13:30 – 14:30	Lunch
14:30 – 15:30	Session 3: Enforcement and Regulation S. Prasanna , Advocate, Supreme Court of India PDPB has a grievance redressal mechanism that seeks to cater to consumers' right to redress. This session will enable users with knowledge about basic questions like: Who to approach for complaint filing, inquiry, appeal; When to go; What to go for (understanding and becoming aware of risks such as breach of personal data, non-compliance of requests made by user) and questions that a user must know the answers to, in order to set right the wrong done unto him/her.
