An emerging challenge for policymakers is the global disparity between GDP growth and employment. It stems from a skills mismatch, where government-driven supply does not align with society-driven demand. The Prime Minister stressed G20's role in skill development and forward-thinking policies to support workers with an emphasis on social security.

Therefore, CUTS International, India; in partnership with Fundação Dom Cabral, Brazil; and Development Policy Research Unit, South Africa have come together to develop and advocate for a Global Compact on Growth and Employment.

The key points of discussion will be:

- A better understanding of challenges and opportunities presented by new and emerging technologies
- Navigating challenges and opportunities through resilient policy response
- Generating support from among policy-makers, business and the civil society for a Global Compact on Growth and Employment
